UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

MARIA DE LA LUZ PEREZ BAUTISTA, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

JUUL LABS, INC., et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 20-cv-01613-HSG

ORDER DENYING MOTIONS TO COMPEL ARBITRATION

Re: Dkt. Nos. 34, 37

Pending before the Court are motions to compel arbitration and stay the proceedings filed by Defendants Long Ying International, Inc. (“LYI”), David M. Ho, Juul Labs, Inc. (“Juul”), and the Coalition for Reasonable Vaping Regulation (“CRVR”). Dkt. Nos. 34 (“LYI Mot.”); 37 (“Juul Mot.”). Briefing on the motions is complete. Dkt. Nos. 49 (“LYI Opp.”); 50 (“Juul Opp.”); 51 (“LYI Reply”); 52 (“Juul Reply”). On June 25, 2020, the Court held a hearing on the motions. Dkt. No. 65. For the following reasons, the Court DENIES Defendants’ motion to compel arbitration and stay the proceedings.

I. BACKGROUND

On June 25, 2019, San Francisco’s Board of Supervisors banned the sale and distribution of e-cigarettes and vaping products in San Francisco. On July 10, 2019, the San Francisco Department of Elections certified a ballot measure (Proposition C) for the 2019 general election that would repeal the ban passed by the Board of Supervisors. See Declaration of David M. Ho (“Ho Decl.,” Dkt. No. 44) ¶ 2.

CRVR is a political committee and advocacy organization established and incorporated under California law to “advocat[e] for the enforcement of strong and coherent laws, regulations and policies which will prevent the use of e-cigarettes and other tobacco products by youth under

1 the age of 21, while allowing adults the choice to continue purchasing these products in brick and 2 mortar stores and online.” Id. ¶ 3, Ex. D. CRVR retained LYI, a San Francisco-based strategic 3 consultancy company, to provide campaign consulting and field management services in support 4 of the Yes on C Campaign. David Ho, the CEO of LYI, is a political consultant and registered 5 lobbyist. Mr. Ho was also retained by CRVR as an independent contractor to provide field 6 campaign consulting services. Id. ¶ 2.

7 Plaintiffs Maria de la Luz Perez Bautista, Luz Perez Bautista, and Salvadora Correa 8 (collectively, “Plaintiffs”)¹ are former campaign workers who were hired by LYI to provide 9 canvassing, phone banking, and administrative services, purportedly as independent contractors, to 10 support the Yes on C Campaign in San Francisco in 2019. Plaintiffs are native Spanish speakers 11 who applied for a position to join the Spanish-speaking campaign team. Dkt. No. 49-1 (“Bautista-12 Perez Decl.”) ¶ 4; Dkt. No. 49-2 (“Perez Bautista Decl.”) ¶ 4; Dkt. No. 49-3 (“Correa Decl.”) ¶ 4.

13 Each of the Plaintiffs entered into an Independent Contractor Agreement (“ICA”) with LYI 14 under which they worked for the “Yes on C Campaign.” Dkt. No. 1 (“Compl.”) ¶¶ 9-11. Between 15 August and October 2019, Plaintiffs worked as phone bank callers and door-to-door canvassers, 16 and Plaintiff Luz Perez Bautista also worked as an administrative assistant. Id. Plaintiffs admit 17 that they each signed an agreement entitled “Independent Contractor Agreement” with LYI. Id. ¶¶ 18 25-26. However, Plaintiffs contend that they were only offered the ICA in English, and were not 19 given the option of receiving a translated version of the ICA or allowed to take it home to have it 20 translated. Bautista-Perez Decl. ¶ 6; Perez Bautista Decl. ¶¶ 7-9; Correa Decl. ¶ 8.

21 Plaintiffs and LYI entered into the ICAs for the stated purpose of providing services for 22 CRVR. Ho Decl. ¶ 5, Exs. A-C. Mr. Ho signed the contracts on behalf of LYI. Compl. ¶ 25; Ho 23 Decl. ¶ 4. The ICAs all contain the following arbitration clause:

All disputes over the terms of this Agreement not resolved in a reasonable time by the parties shall be submitted to mediation before a mutually agreed-upon mediator, with the mediator’s costs borne equally by the parties. If the mediation is unsuccessful, then the dispute shall be resolved by arbitration before a mutually agreed- upon arbitrator, which shall be binding on the parties, with the prevailing party in the arbitration entitled to recover reasonable attorneys' fees and costs from the losing party. Notwithstanding the foregoing, either party may pursue resolution of a dispute over this Agreement via small claims court.

Ho Decl. ¶¶ 4, 6, Exs. A-C (emphasis added).

Plaintiffs allege that “Defendants are each joint employers of Plaintiffs and the Campaign Workers, and Defendants are jointly and severally liable for violations of applicable San Francisco, California, and federal law.” Compl. ¶ 16. Further, Plaintiffs allege that “[CRVR] and [Juul] are each other’s alter egos and form a single enterprise.” Id. ¶ 13.

Specifically, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants are liable for (1) Failure to Pay Wages Owed at Separation, Cal. Labor Code §§ 201, 203; (2) Failure to Furnish Accurate Wage Statements, Cal. Labor Code § 226; (3) Failure to Pay Minimum Wages Under California Law, Cal. Labor Code §§ 1194, 1194.2; (4) Failure to Pay San Francisco Minimum Wage, S.F. Admin. Code § 12R; (5) Failure to Pay Overtime Wages, Cal. Labor Code §§ 510, 1194; (6) Failure to Reimburse Business Expenses, Cal. Labor Code § 2802; (7) Failure to Provide Meal Periods, Cal. Labor Code §§ 226.7, 512; (8) Violations of Unfair Competition Law, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, et seq.; and (9) Failure to Pay Overtime Wages, FLSA, 29 U.S.C. § 207. Plaintiffs also seek to represent a class of “all individuals who were hired by [LYI] to perform phone banking, canvassing and/or administrative tasks for the Yes on C Campaign and did perform such work at any time during the period between July 2019 and October 2019.” Id. ¶ 54.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

The Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”), 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq., sets forth a policy favoring arbitration agreements and establishes that a written arbitration agreement is “valid, irrevocable, and enforceable.” 9 U.S.C. § 2; Epic Sys. Corp. v. Lewis, 138 S. Ct. 1612, 1621 (2018) (noting federal policy favoring arbitration); Moses H. Cone Mem’l Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 24 (1983) (same). The FAA allows that a party “aggrieved by the alleged failure, neglect, or refusal of another to arbitrate under a written agreement for arbitration may petition any United States district court . . . for an order directing that . . . arbitration proceed in the manner provided for in such agreement.” 9 U.S.C. § 4. This federal policy is “simply to ensure the enforceability, 1 according to their terms, of private agreements to arbitrate.” Volt Info. Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of 2 Trustees of Leland Stanford Jr. Univ., 489 U.S. 468, 476 (1989). Courts must resolve any 3 “ambiguities as to the scope of the arbitration clause itself . . . in favor of arbitration.” Id.

4 Arbitration agreements “shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such 5 grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.” 9 U.S.C. § 2. In analyzing 6 whether an arbitration agreement is valid and enforceable, “generally applicable contract defenses, 7 such as fraud, duress, or unconscionability, may be applied to invalidate arbitration agreements 8 without contravening § 2.” Doctor’s Assoc., Inc. v. Casarotto, 517 U.S. 681, 687 (1996). In 9 interpreting the validity and scope of an arbitration agreement, courts apply state law principles of 10 contract formation and interpretation. See Wolsey, Ltd. v. Foodmaker, Inc., 144 F.3d 1205, 1210 11 (9th Cir. 1998).

12 III. DISCUSSION

13 In determining whether to compel arbitration, two “gateway” issues must be decided by 14 the Court: (1) whether there exists a valid agreement to arbitrate between the parties; and (2) 15 whether the agreement covers the dispute at issue. Pacificare Health Sys., Inc. v. Book, 538 U.S.
 16 401, 407, n.2 (2003); Chiron Corp. v. Ortho Diagnostic Sys., Inc., 207 F.3d 1126, 1130 (9th Cir.
 17 2000). As detailed below, the Court finds that even if a valid agreement to arbitrate was formed, 18 Plaintiffs’ causes of action are not covered by the applicable arbitration provision. Therefore, the 19 Court will only address whether Plaintiffs’ causes of action are covered by the scope of the 20 arbitration provision.

21 A. Plaintiffs’ Claims are Not Covered by the Arbitration Provision

22 Under the FAA, the Court must compel arbitration if the claims asserted fall within the 23 scope of a valid arbitration agreement. AT&T Techs., Inc. v. Comm. Workers of Am., 475 U.S.
 24 643, 650 (1986) (“Where a contract contains an arbitration clause, there is a presumption of 25 arbitrability [and] ‘[d]oubts should be resolved in favor of coverage.’”). Here, the ICA provides 26 that “[a]ll disputes over the terms of this Agreement” shall be submitted to mediation in the first 27 instance, and that if mediation is unsuccessful such disputes will “be resolved by arbitration before 28 a mutually agreed-upon arbitrator, which shall be binding on the parties[.]” Ho. Decl. Ex. A 1 (emphasis added). The central dispute for purposes of this motion is whether Plaintiffs’ 2 classification as independent contractors by the ICA means that Plaintiffs’ labor code causes of 3 action are “disputes over the terms of [the] Agreement.”

4 Defendants contend that the allegations that Plaintiffs were not paid for all time worked, 5 provided accurate wage statements, paid minimum wages, provided with meal and rest breaks, 6 reimbursed for work-related expenditures, or paid all wages due upon separation necessarily flow 7 from Plaintiffs’ independent contractor classification under the ICA, and that had Plaintiffs not 8 agreed to the arbitration provision in the ICA, they would not have been selected for their 9 respective positions by Defendants. Put differently, Defendants believe that because Plaintiffs 10 performed work for LYI under the ICA, their claims must arise from, and are therefore a dispute 11 over the terms of, the ICA. Plaintiffs counter that the scope of the arbitration clause at issue is 12 exceedingly narrow, and that these causes of action are neither based in contract nor a dispute over 13 any the of terms of the ICA.

14 Ninth Circuit and California cases support Plaintiffs’ position. In Narayan v. EGL, Inc., 15 616 F.3d 895 (9th Cir. 2010), the Ninth Circuit explained the distinction between claims arising 16 under a contract and those arising under an applicable labor code statute. The issue in Narayan
17 was whether a contractual choice of law provision requiring the application of Texas law applied 18 to claimed California labor code violations. The Ninth Circuit explained that labor code violations 19 did not arise out of the contract, reasoning that the plaintiffs’ claims for relief were dependent on 20 whether they were employees (as opposed to independent contractors), which in turn was 21 dependent “on the definition that the otherwise governing law—not the parties—gives to the term 22 ‘employee.’” Id. at 899 (emphasis added). The Ninth Circuit further explained that although the 23 contracts could be relevant evidence later in the dispute, the labor code causes of action were not 24 based on those contracts, stating that “[w]hile the contracts will likely be used as evidence to 25 prove or disprove the statutory claims, the claims do not arise out of the contract, involve the 26 interpretation of any contract terms, or otherwise require there to be a contract.” Id. (citing S.G.
27 Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Dep’t of Indus. Relations, 48 Cal.3d 341, 348 (Cal. 1989) (listing over a 28 dozen factors “logically pertinent to the inherently difficult determination whether a provider of

1 service is an employee or an excluded independent contractor for purposes of workers' 2 compensation law.”)) (emphasis added).

3 In light of the Supreme Court’s directives favoring arbitration, the application of the Ninth 4 Circuit’s reasoning regarding a choice of law provision—as opposed to an arbitration clause—5 only gets the Court so far. However, in Elijahjuan v. Superior Court, 210 Cal. App. 4th 15 (Cal.
6 Ct. App. 2012), the California Court of Appeal addressed an issue nearly identical to the one 7 presently before the Court. In Elijahjuan, plaintiffs alleged violations of the California Labor 8 Code and the Unfair Business Practices Act, among others, arising from alleged misclassification 9 as independent contractors instead of employees. Defendants moved to compel arbitration 10 pursuant to the relevant contracts, which stated that the parties agreed to arbitration “if a dispute 11 arises with regard to [their] application or interpretation.” Id. at 18. “The crucial issue,” the Court 12 noted, “is whether the arbitration provision—which applies to any dispute that ‘arises with regard 13 to [the Agreements]’ application or interpretation’—includes the alleged misclassification [] as 14 independent contractors.” Id. at 20-21. The court further noted that the “critical dispute in this 15 case is not whether the Agreements describe petitioners as independent contractors—they clearly 16 do—but whether petitioners were in fact independent contractors under the applicable legal 17 principles.” Id. at 21.

18 Applying the Ninth Circuit’s reasoning in Narayan, the court in Elijahjuan found that 19 plaintiffs’ rights “under the Labor Code are distinct from their contractual rights under the 20 Agreements. The ultimate issue . . . is whether [defendants] satisfied the requirements of the Labor 21 Code, not how the parties described their relationship in the Agreements.” Id. at 23. The Court 22 therefore held that “Labor Code claims do not arise out of the contract but instead are distinct from 23 rights under the Agreements,” and reversed an order compelling arbitration. Id. at 24.² Put 24 differently, the court concluded that misclassification causes of action under California law are 25 “unrelated to the substance of the parties’ contractual obligations, and instead depend[] on extra-

26
27
28 ² The Court also distinguished the provision at issue there from broader arbitration provisions encompassing “any and all employment-related disputes.” Id. at 24 (citing Brown v. Ralphs Grocery Co., 197 Cal.App.4th 489, 495 (Cal. Ct. App. 2011)).

1 contractual legal obligations an employer owes its employees, but does not owe its independent 2 contractors.” Id. at 17 (emphasis added).³

3 In response, Defendants rely on a number of cases involving broad arbitration clauses, and 4 point to the Supreme Court’s decision in Epic Systems as functionally abrogating prior labor code 5 non-arbitrability decisions. Neither argument is persuasive.

6 First, the arbitration clauses in the cases Defendants cite were fundamentally unlike the one 7 in the ICA. For example, in Garcia v. Pexco, LLC, 11 Cal. App. 5th 782 (Cal. Ct. App. 2017), the 8 arbitration agreement provided that “any dispute’ [the parties] could not resolve informally would 9 be determined by binding arbitration,” and specifically defined as subject to arbitration disputes 10 regarding “wages, vacation pay, sick time pay, overtime pay, state and federal employment laws 11 and regulation, including but not limited to, the Fair Labor Standards Act (29 U.S.C. § 201 et 12 seq.), including the Equal Pay Act (29 U.S.C. § 206 et seq.)” Id. at 784-85. And the only issue 13 there was whether a nonsignatory could compel arbitration, and Plaintiff did not dispute that an 14 arbitration agreement existed or that it was valid. Id. at 785 (“[Plaintiff] does not contend the 15 arbitration agreement is invalid or unenforceable, and indeed he admits that his claims must be 16 arbitrated with signatory Real Time.”).

17 Similarly, in Reynosa-Juarez v. Accountable Healthcare Staffing, Inc., No. 5:18-cv-06302-18 EJD, 2019 WL 5814653, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 7, 2019), plaintiff signed a “Short Term Travel 19 Contract,” which specified that for plaintiff “[t]o be paid ... overtime, any overtime worked must 20 be approved before the shift is worked, in writing, by someone of authority at the facility.
21 Unapproved overtime will be paid to you as regular time.” The arbitration clause also stated that 22 “[a]ny dispute to this agreement will be settled by binding arbitration.” Id. Because the Short 23 Term Travel Contract contained “specific provisions relating to the payment of overtime, bonuses, 24 and per diems along with other terms and conditions of employment,” and the language in the 25 contract about overtime payments formed the basis of the causes of actions asserted against the

26
27 ³ In holding that the arbitration provision there did not cover misclassification causes of action, the 28 California Court of Appeal also noted that “California law, like federal law, favors enforcement of valid arbitration agreements.” Id. at 20 (quoting Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc., 24 Cal.4th 83, 97 (Cal. 2000)).

1 defendants, the Court found that FLSA, California Labor Code, and UCL causes of action were 2 covered by the arbitration provision. *Id.*⁴

3 Defendants also rely on the Supreme Court’s recent decision in Epic Systems, 138 S. Ct.
4 1612, to argue that Plaintiffs’ authority that predates that 2018 decision is no longer good law.
5 LYI Reply at 6. In Epic Systems, the Supreme Court addressed whether employees are permitted 6 to bring their claims in class or collective actions, regardless of their agreement with their 7 employers, and held that a group of employees could not rely on a federal statute to void their 8 agreement to arbitrate disputes with their employer through one-on-one arbitration. Id. at 1619 9 (“In the [FAA], Congress has instructed federal courts to enforce arbitration agreements according 10 to their terms – including terms providing for individualized proceedings.”). The Supreme Court 11 analyzed the National Labor Relations Act (“NLRA”) and confirmed that it does not conflict with 12 the FAA’s command to enforce bilateral arbitration agreements. Id. at 1624-27. The Supreme 13 Court held that it does not “mak[e] any difference” whether a contrary rule arises under federal 14 law or state law; the FAA requires courts “to enforce, not override, the terms of the arbitration 15 agreement[.]” Id. at 1623.

16 Contrary to Defendants’ assertions, however, Epic Systems does not abrogate (or even 17 impact) Plaintiffs’ authority (including Narayan or Elijahjuan), nor does it establish that 18 Plaintiffs’ causes of action are somehow subject to a form of mandatory arbitration. Epic Systems 19 simply holds that arbitration agreements “must be enforced as written,” and that the NLRA does 20 not reflect congressional intent to displace to FAA. Id. at 1623-27, 1632. The Supreme Court 21 described the agreement at issue in Epic Systems as “providing that [the parties] would arbitrate 22 any disputes that might arise between them.” Id. at 1620. So that decision, involving the broadest 23 possible arbitration clause, does not bear on the Court’s analysis of the substantially different 24

25 ⁴ In Fontana v. Chefs’ Warehouse Inc., No 16-cv-06521-HSG, 2017 WL 2591872, at *1 (N.D.
26 Cal. June 15, 2017), this Court compelled arbitration of dispute regarding a severance agreement 27 where the arbitration provision governed “all disputes” “arising out of, relating to, or resulting 28 from the terms and conditions of Employee’s employment.” Fontana, however, did not involve the classification of an individual as an independent contractor versus an employee, and is distinguishable on that ground alone. In any event, the arbitration clause there was substantially broader than the one presently before the Court.

1 clause in this case.⁵

2 When coupled with the clear directive that arbitration provisions covering disputes “arising 3 out of this agreement” or “arising hereunder” only cover claims arising from the contract terms, 4 even if such claims in some sense would not have arisen but for the parties’ agreement, the Court
5 is satisfied that Plaintiffs’ causes of action are not disputes “over the terms of [the] Agreement”
6 that would invoke the arbitration provision in the ICA. See Cape Flattery Ltd. v. Titan Mar., LLC, 7 647 F.3d 914, 921–924 (9th Cir. 2011) (“[a]ny dispute arising under this agreement” was not 8 broad enough to require arbitration of a related claim for violation of a federal statute); Tracer 9 Research Corp. v. Nat’l Envt’l Servs. Co., 42 F.3d 1292, 1295 (9th Cir. 1994) (agreement to 10 arbitrate “any controversy or claim arising out of this agreement” is more narrow than agreement 11 to arbitrate claims related to the agreement and does not encompass tort or statutory claims, even 12 if the “tort claim would not have arisen ‘but for’ the parties’ licensing agreement”); Mediterranean 13 Enters., Inc. v. Ssangyong Corp., 708 F.2d 1458, 1464 (9th Cir. 1983) (finding clause with 14 “arising hereunder” language “is intended to cover a much narrower scope of disputes than 15 language that includes ‘relating’ to a contract; i.e., only those relating to the interpretation and 16 performance of the contract itself.”); Rice v. Downs, 248 Cal. App. 4th 175, 180, 186-194 (2016) 17 (clause providing for arbitration of any controversy “arising out of this agreement” was “narrow”); 18 compare Brown v. Quantcast Corp., No. 19-cv-5773-EMC, 2019 WL 6727503, at *2 (N.D. Cal.
19 Dec. 11, 2019) (granting motion to compel arbitration where the arbitration provision “[did] not 20 state that it covers claims arising from or regarding the employment agreement,” but instead 21

22 ⁵ Defendants contend that following the Supreme Court’s decision in Epic Systems, courts have 23 routinely enforced arbitration provisions that require FLSA claims to be arbitrated. See, e.g., 24 Hughes v. S.A.W. Ent’mnt, 16-cv-03371-LB, 2018 WL 4109100, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2018)
25 (granting motion to compel arbitration of individual claims brought in putative collective action 26 under FLSA and putative class action under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23); Carabajal v. Rentokil N. Am., 27 Inc., 17-CV-6651-YGR, 2018 WL 3304635, at *1 (N.D. Cal. July 5, 2018) (granting motion to 28 compel arbitration where the clause at issue provided that “[a]ny and all claims or controversies arising out of Employee’s application or candidacy for employment, employment, or cessation of employment with the Company shall be resolved through final and binding arbitration”). But Defendants again miss the point. The issue is not whether these types of causes of action may be subject to arbitration—that is undisputed. Rather, the issue is whether the wording of the arbitration provision in the ICA captures labor code claims based on misclassification, and none of the authority cited by Defendants addresses that question.

1 provided that it “cover[ed] claims arising from or regarding (inter alia) performance of the 2 employment agreement.”) (emphasis in original).

3 Although the FAA “establishes that, as a matter of federal law, any doubts concerning the 4 scope of arbitrable issues should be resolved in favor of arbitration,” Simula, Inc. v. Autoliv, Inc., 5 175 F.3d 716, 719 (9th Cir. 1999) (quoting Moses, 460 U.S. at 24-25), the Court finds that 6 Plaintiffs’ claims are not a dispute over the terms of the ICA so as to trigger the arbitration 7 provision. Without question, Defendants could have drafted the arbitration provision to cover 8 labor code misclassification causes of action by, for example, expressly providing for arbitration 9 of disputes or claims arising out of, or related to, Plaintiffs’ employment, or of all labor code 10 claims. Instead, Defendants drafted a narrow clause that only covers “disputes over the terms of” 11 the ICA, which, applying Ninth Circuit and California law, Plaintiffs’ causes of action clearly are 12 not. Therefore, the Court finds that Plaintiffs did not agree to arbitrate the causes of action pled in 13 the Complaint.⁶

14 Because the dispute does not fall within the scope of the arbitration provision in the ICA, 15 the Court DENIES the motions to compel arbitration. The Court also DENIES Juul’s motion to 16 compel arbitration as a non-signatory in light of the Court’s finding that the arbitration provision 17 in the ICA does not cover Plaintiffs’ claims. See, e.g., Lau v. Mercedes-Benz USA, LLC, No. CV 18 11-1940 MEJ, 2012 WL 370557, at *5, 10-11 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 31, 2012) (denying motion to 19 compel unenforceable arbitration agreement even where non-signatory had standing to enforce 20 arbitration clause under theories of equitable estoppel and principal-agency relationship); Corin v.
21 Cintas Corp., No. CIV. S-09-2384 FCD/KJM, 2009 WL 5206712, at *1 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2009) 22 (denying motion to compel and finding that the court need to consider whether non-signatories to 23 an unenforceable arbitration agreement can also compel arbitration).

24 IV. CONCLUSION

25 Because Plaintiffs’ causes of action are not subject to the arbitration provision in the ICA, 26

27 ⁶ Because the Court finds that the arbitration provision in the ICA does not cover Plaintiffs’ causes 28 of action, the Court need not discuss Plaintiffs’ arguments regarding unconscionability or class-wide arbitration.

1 the Court DENIES the Motions to Compel. The Court further sets a telephonic case management 2 conference for August 25, 2020 at 2:00 p.m. The parties should be prepared to discuss next steps, 3 including a plan for resolving the Motion for Conditional Certification. Dkt. No. 53. All counsel 4 shall use the following dial-in information to access the call: Dial-In: 888-808-6929/Passcode: 5 6064255. For call clarity, parties shall NOT use speaker phone or earpieces for these calls, and 6 where at all possible, parties shall use landlines. The parties are further advised to ensure that the 7 Court can hear and understand them clearly before speaking at length.
